Lemon Grove to lose street funds under new formula

by Joe Naiman
and Cheryl Cohen

The City of Lemon Grove stands to lose $600,000 in gas tax funds under a new formula proposed by the San Diego Association of Governments (SANDAG).

In previous years, gas tax monies were disbursed by a formula which gave each city $50,000 plus an additional amount based upon their population (for Lemon Grove, another $50,000 annually).

SANDAG staff has proposed to a new method of disbursement that will leave seven cities out of the money.

A six-year Regional Transportation Improvement Plan will be decided upon tomorrow to determine the fate of the state highway funds for various cities in the county.

As the plan for distribution stands now, Lemon Grove will be one of the cities left with zero dollars from these funds for their own local street projects.

Lemon Grove Public Works Director Chuck Stuck says that under the new plan, cities are in direct competition with Caltrans and county transit districts for these funds, rather than each getting a separate portion.

When SANDAG presented their plan during a briefing to public works directors around the county, it was not forthcoming about the elimination of the local fund allocation, Stuck said.

It was only disclosed upon direct questioning at the meeting, rather than being made a part of their staff report.

Cities who did not submit a laundry list of projects, were simply left out of the funding.

"It was kind of underhanded of them not to tell us, because we could have fought that," said Stuck. "In other words, SANDAG will arbitrarily decide how all $283 million dollars will be spent. We want to see that formula money put back in, or see another way we can accomplish the same thing."

Nevertheless, an 8 - 5 vote, the City and County Technical Advisory Committee decided to go with one of two alternative distribution plans on the table, where San Diego would lose $7.5 million (half of its usual amount) over the six-year period.

In East County, Lemon Grove would lose all of its previously allotted amount of $602,341 while La Mesa would lose $992,641.

Stuck lobbied other public works directors by letter to ask for reinstatement of a more equitable method of distribution. SANDAG's Transportation Subcommittee decided to look at the plan again in a second meeting.

Now, there is $15 million left on the table to possibly designate to cities who would be left with nothing under SANDAG's proposal.

The initial recommendation featured a heavy emphasis on arterial routes rather than surface transportation, a formula which would cost several cities significant money for local projects.

Little Darlings to offer male revue

by Cheryl Cohen

Lemon Grove's Little Darlings Adult Cabaret has already forged a unique market niche by offering all-nude female dancing. The club will add a new notch to its bedpost of distinction Saturday night by hosting an all-nude male review.

Deriving pleasure from looking at something you can't have eludes many. Observe any window-shopper, movie-star fan or the audience at an all-male nude review, however, and it's clear voyeurism is a popular pastime.

San Diego clubs like Girls Nite Out, which specialized in male strippers for female audiences, couldn't bring in the crowds needed to survive. Little Darlings hopes to change all that with the presentation of the Andrew Male Review.

What makes a middle-aged woman get in her car and drive across town to see a show like this rather than spend a night out bowling or shopping?

Fran Feldman, 49, caught the Male Review's show last weekend at a club near the Sports Arena. Watching a muscle-bound hunk retrieve a tip from her daughter's cleavage with his teeth, Feldman laughed. She admitted it's the attention the dancers give audience members of all ages that does it.

"You kind of forget the age difference," she said.

Feldman and her daughter, Monica, have been following Andrew Morrison's shows for a couple of years now. They prefer shows aboard cruise ships, because on land, all-nude clubs cannot serve alcohol.

"I think everyone had a better time that way," Feldman said, noting that it's much more difficult for the troupe to get the crowd warmed up for the first performance when they're only allowed to drink soft drinks.

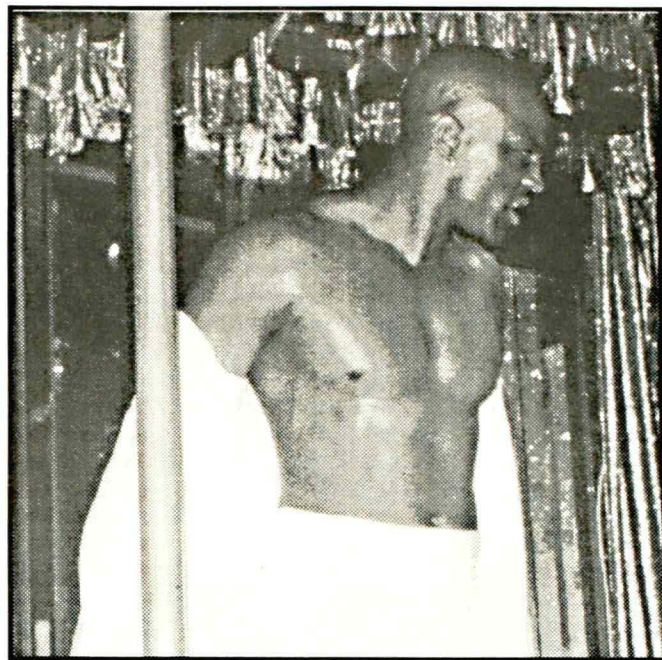

These restrictions could also be an obstacle to keeping crowds revved up after the performance. In San Diego, city ordinance allows women dancers to bare all but forbids male entertainers from doing the same.

The men must stop short of removing their G-strings — unless they choose to "test the system," as Morrison's group did last month.

Lemon Grove's ordinances do not address directly the subject of male versus female nudity. Nor should it, said City Attorney Gloria McLean.

"I don't see the difference," she said.

Neither does Morrison, who is bringing his dance team to Lemon Grove, fully prepared to show the "Full Monty."

"We're not doing this to be macho, we're here to give people a great time," he said.

The Male Review's dance numbers are costumed and choreographed to themes including Cheech & Chong, "Grease!" and "Top Gun."

It's important to them that people see the difference between what they do and the performances given by the women dancers, who they say do straight strip routines.

For one, the men seem to be having a much better time on stage. Jokes are interspersed with the themed dances and there are even instructions on how to tip.

Morrison shows a volunteer from the audience how to place the dollar bills into the waistband of his G-string, and how to carefully determine the denomination beforehand.

"If you try to pull this," he said, pointing to the tucked-in dollar, "change is not going to come out."

Morrison thinks he's got a great job.

"Why would I go out with a bunch of guys to a bar to have fun, when I can have such a great time at work?" he asked.

The attraction to work such as this is a combination of attention and money.

"Neither one hurts," offered troupe member Cooch, with the others smiling in agreement.

Although the group also performs the usual lap-, table- and couch-dances for a fee like most strippers, they insist that they're apart from the rest.

"The clubs pay us as entertainers, not strippers," Morrison said.

Women dancers have to give the house a cut of their earnings, while this group only gives a cut for "using the facilities," such as the booths where the couch dances take place.

The distinction may be a small one, but is important to the group.

Morrison said that he and another dancer named Scott started out as waiters in a strip club, and were told that they'd have to wait for a couple of months before they'd be allowed to dance.

Undaunted, they talked their way into an audition and by the next day, were working on stage.

"We took one look at what the guys on stage were making, and knew our waitering days were over," Morrison said.

He didn't stop at dancing. Along with a couple of the other dancers, he's been featured in Penthouse and Playgirl. Morrison has appeared in Playgirl five times, including two covers, and is hoping to become their "Man of the Year."

Apparently, however, the attention and money of the business aren't enough to keep him forever. He views it as an "evil" what-are-you-willing-to-do-to-make-money type of industry, which he wants to eventually leave to enter the world of real estate and construction.

Meanwhile, Morrison and his group will perform this Saturday in Lemon Grove, where they promise to bare it all for those who decide not to go bowling after all.

Lemon Twist

by Cheryl Cohen

Social calendar getting a little jammed up? You wouldn't know it by the lack of information we get outta the rec. department here, but not to worry. - I do have your Sunday all planned out:

After a leisurely morning recovering from all the Saturday night excitement you can muster in a town that is virtually closed for the summer, you mosey over to the 7-11 and cash in all your 10s and 20s for ones and fives. If you don't have any tens and twenties, don't knock off the store, just borrow some from a naive friend. Proceed to the Hysterical Society's Parsonage Museum at 7715 Church St. for its "Midsummer Ice Cream Social" from 2:30 - 5 p.m., and act like that's the pinnacle of your day. Then, grab some dinner to top off your dessert, DUMP THE OLD MAN and meet me at 6 p.m. where the dust meets the turf at Little Darlings, 8290 Broadway in Lemon Grove to see the "Full Monty," as pulled off by none other than Andrew's Male Review. I'm here to tell you ladies, it's worth the divorce.

Ice cream social, Full Monty. Ice cream social, Full Monty. Has some kinda natural order to it, doesn't it? And, who says Lemonites can't be worldly, too? Look, I know I know. There's this "Big Stigma" about the pink palace at the patoot of Broadway, but I want you to put it all aside and (just this once) trust me - this isn't (only) what you think this is, and that big stigma ain't all so scary when it's being shaken, rattled and rolled, choreographed and combined with humor. Look, I was a doubter, too - but I have pre-tested this show out for you, and can attest that I emerged unscathed, smiling, a little warm (given the amount of air conditioning in the place), but alive enough to tell the tale. These guys don't bite - hard, anyway. Meet me there, and be a good neighbor to a business that seems to be able to support the rest of Lemon Grove's little projects and organizations without even a second thought. Yeah, that's it. Consider it a "civic obligation." Now, if I could only get reimbursed for all those tips!

Pete Smith, guardian of some of Lemon Grove's most precious momentos of the past, generously schlepped all the past bound and gagged volumes of The Review out of storage and turned them over (somewhat like a bad drug deal) to Steve Saint in broad daylight in a parking lot downtown. Oh, we're relatively trustworthy, but it'll be really difficult to return these treasures. It's funny, what some people get off on, and others could care less about (no, this is not a reference to the above paragraphs). While Steve and I oooed and cooed over the tissue-paper thin, yellowed tomes, others in the room went on about their normal lives as though they didn't have the most valuable and interesting thing in the universe on the table in front of them.

We're gearing up for the celebration of The Review's first 50 years in the month of August, with special editions and, of course, the big birthday party on Aug. 17. But, we could really use your help with anecdotal episodes you may recall having to do with the paper, its publishers or staff during this time period. We're also interested in the time period itself in Lemon Grove, along with descriptions of your sense of community and how it may or may not have changed.

Please send them along to The Review, or directly to me at 264-3153 (msg.), 264-4180 (fax), or E-mail me at curious@cts.com. This is an awesome chance to help us dig up dirt on ourselves, so don't delay!

Best fireworks are on Old Time Days

Fireworks! On the Fourth of July, they are a sure sign that summer is officially under way. If we are lucky, we will experience them at other times throughout the summer. But, I believe the best time to see them, and a sure sign summer is near, is during Old Time Days. The fireworks display this year was phenomenal and each Old Time Days celebration seems to bring a better display.

But Old Time Days is more than just a fireworks display. It is an opportunity for our children to have fun, for the adults to shop or visit with friends and, most importantly, for the community to gather together. The planning for this event starts soon after the New Year's fireworks which brings me to my topic for this column - the planning committee for Old Time Days.

Contrary to popular belief, the city of Lemon Grove does not run this event. The city may help with the set-up and provide some sponsorship, but the actual event is planned and carried out by a volunteer committee. The Old Time Days parade has an excellent core of volunteers who have many years experience. However, the other events of that weekend are planned by a different committee and that committee will be reorganized for 1999. Consequently, here are lots of opportunities for individuals to get involved in our next Old Time Days celebration.

Experience isn't necessary. The city has the records from previous years and provides planning guidance. A huge time commitment, by and large, also isn't necessary. The committee is composed of individuals who enjoy taking the lead in organizing events and others who only want to pass out flyers. The Old Time Days committee accommodates volunteers with all levels of spare time and skills. But, it does need volunteers.

So before you move on to "Lemon Twist" call City Hall (464-6934) and leave your name and phone number for this venture into Lemon Grove volunteerism. Myself or our Assistant City Manager, Bob Richardson, will be glad to give you more information or answer any

by Paul Treske

I am not now, nor have I ever been a financial whiz. Over the years, the best I could do in this area was to successfully manage a checking account, although I've even had trouble with that of late. As a result, I am totally at sea over the muddled financial issues surrounding a new baseball stadium.

But I do know this: if we fail to keep the Padres in town, San Diego will never again be as pleasant a place to live as it is today.

As one who reads the Letters to the Editor in our daily newspaper, I have discovered that, apparently, fiscal parity is the only deciding factor as to whether a new downtown ballpark should be built or not. I often almost pity some of the writers whose criteria for building anything appears to be the cost involved.

Most of these people apparently didn't want the Convention Center built, don't feel we can afford a new main library or payout one cent for new schools unless they can be afforded right down to the last dime. They would see no music halls built, no outdoor art or anything that wasn't a life and death need of themselves or their friends.

I know that I write as a lifelong sports fan, and one who has lived and died with the Padres since 1969. Not everyone is a fan. My own son snickers at the mention of the Padres. But I remember 1984 as if it were yesterday.

The Padres were in the playoffs and the town was alive with a fever of joy and excitement only matched 10 years later when the Chargers reached the Super Bowl.

Fan and non-fan alike were caught up in something that we here have seldom known. The town was filled on both occasions with banners, songs, cheers and a fervor that went beyond the mere issue of fandom. San Diego was filled, on both occasions, with an outpouring of civic pride unmatched before or since.

Plainly, it far outdistanced sports and became something bigger; something that enveloped us all in a common kinship of pride and excitement. In short, it was something that money can never buy.

We nearly lost the Padres once, and without a new ballpark, we will surely lose them for good. Padre owner John Moores is an outstanding civic citizen in every way. But a continuous loss of money, because San Diego cared so little that it would not help would drive even him away.

I don't know if the current fiscal plan is sound or not, but I do know that if San Diego does not rise to this occasion, we will lose something so intrinsically important that the city will be forever changed for the worse.

Just testing ...

I guess those who live along the eastern seaboard of the U.S. are getting some mixed messages recently about intelligence. Is doing well on certain kinds of tests a desirable trait or not? In Connecticut (the community of New London to be exact) a man scored too high on the test to become a police officer so he didn't get the job. Meantime in Massachusetts, almost 60 percent of those aspiring to be teachers failed the state's first certification exam and so they won't be going to work in the local schools anytime soon. What a frightening situation it must be to be a test taker in New England these days. What to shoot for: high, mediocre, low?

Robert Jordon wanted to be a police officer in New London, Connecticut. He thought it would be a great job. One that would be challenging and fulfilling. Determined as he was, Jordon took the prescribed test for the New London police department and he did pretty well on it. Too well, according to the city manager of New London. He felt that Jordon was just too smart to be a police officer. Jordon didn't get the job. Can't have smart police officers wondering the streets of New London, Connecticut, by Jove.

Now like New London, San Diego has a city manager and a city council. Getting nervous? San Diego uses tests too. Recently the city council of San Diego was chided by one of its very own members as being Felony Stupid. One of its own, not some outsider! The San Diego City Council, like New London's, chooses the city manager, who then selects ... See why I worry about these cockamamie situations back on the east coast? Stupidity has been shown to spread faster than some strains of the flu.

The other half of this intelligence (not intelligent) discussion concerns all of those failing would-be teachers. When 59 percent (out of 1,800 applicants) fail, there's something dreadfully wrong. A lot of questions come to mind. Were they taking the right test? Did they know they were taking a test and it wasn't just some silly education class project? Had they spent four or more years in college? Were they really college graduates and if so, were these institutions actually colleges?

It do boggle da mind, don't it, dude?

So, there you have it: New England intelligence, 1998 style. In one case you fail because you score too high. In another, you don't make it because your score is too low. Right now I'm not sure whether, if forced to do so, I'd choose to live in Massachusetts or Connecticut. Would I want to live in a place where almost 60 percent of a group of test takers — the would-be educators of youth — have no clue that they weren't very well prepared for a career entry test? Or would I choose a place where I'd have to help the cop fill out my speeding ticket?

Not being a New Englander, or for that matter ever having traveled or lived there, one might inquire what right I have to comment on this convoluted situation? Well, as one who frets an awful lot about these sorts of cockamamie things, I think it's not just my right but my duty to say something. Something not too laudatory if possible. If I don't glump onto these examples of real-time lunacy and pass them on, who would?

One last thought. I wonder if anyone has told those aspiring teachers in Massachusetts about the job opportunities that await them in New London, Connecticut?

Reel Thoughts

Now and then, once is not enough

by Betty Jo Tucker

Sometimes movie characters connect with audiences so well that one film about them is not enough. Back in the 30s and 40s, fans wanted to see more of Nick and Nora Charles, that sophisticated husband and wife detective duo, so six "Thin Man" films were made.

Later, heroes like Indiana Jones, Rocky Balboa and Dirty Harry thrilled moviegoers in a series of film sequels. With 19 movies to its credit, the James Bond franchise holds the record for number of films about the same character.

Exploding onto movie screens in 1987, "Lethal Weapon" introduced police detectives Martin Riggs (Mel Gibson) and Roger Murtaugh (Danny Glover). Film audiences were so taken with these unconventional cops and their quirky relationship that the movie became a hit practically overnight.

The guys came back in "Lethal Weapon 2" (1989) and in "Lethal Weapon 3" (1989?). This summer, they are up to their old tricks, and some new ones, in "Lethal Weapon 4," the season's best action flick to date.

Older, but not much wiser, both men face crises in their personal lives. Riggs must decide whether or not to marry his pregnant girlfriend (Rene Russo) and Murtaugh's daughter, also pregnant, is secretly married to a young police officer (Chris Rock).

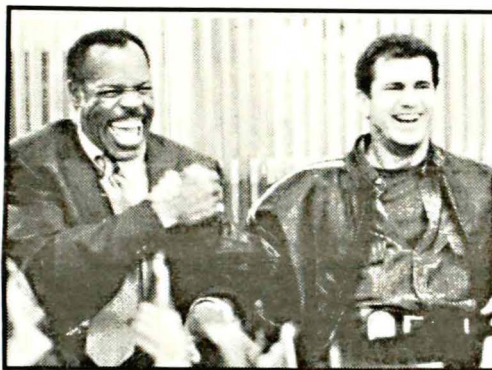

Professionally, Riggs and Murtaugh are involved in an investigation of smuggling by members of an Asian triad. Despite its disturbing scenes of graphic violence, "Lethal Weapon 4" provides engrossing entertainment.

Gibson and Glover still work their magic together; Rock adds his unique brand of humor and Chinese actor Jet Li mesmerizes viewers in his role as a deadly villain with extraordinary martial arts skills.

In contrast, some movies feature characters no one would like to see in more than one film. "Small Soldiers" (DreamWorks Pictures) and 20th Century Fox's "There's Something About Mary" fall into this category.

"Small Soldiers" may appeal to youngsters because of the variety of life-like toys depicted, but it lacks interesting humans viewers can care about.

Although the hilarious "There's Something About Mary" contains laugh-out-loud sight gags (a dog on speed brings down the house) and a glowing comic performance by Cameron Diaz ("My Best Friend's Wedding"), it wallows in bad taste. Vulgar language and offensive sex-related incidents ruin what could have been an excellent romantic comedy.

After seeing these two films, I'm ready for Riggs and Murtaugh again. Bring on "Lethal Weapon 5."

Letter to the Editor

Sign detective seeks truth

Former Grossmont Union High School District candidate and conservative Christian minister, Gary Cass, has the dubious distinction of being the only candidate in Santee who apparently employed vandals in his sign campaign.

It was amazing to watch. One day I would drive past a Tom Page sign and the next day it would be ripped up and replaced with a Gary Cass sign.

I noticed a few other things though, that most people may not have witnessed. I drive passed Bob Ward's house every day, sometimes several times a day as we live on the same street.

One day I noticed a big bunch of Cass signs piled up in his drive way. Mr. Ward is a very conservative Christian, politically active, and it made sense to me that he would be Cass supporter.

I made note of the presence of these signs for several days in a row. One morning I noticed most of the signs in his yard are gone. That very same day, I noticed the first acts of vandalism against Tom Page's signs along Mast Blvd. Tom Page's signs have been torn down and they have been replaced by Cass signs in nearly every single location along Mast.

Hmmm, could there be a connection? Perhaps Mr. Ward would like to illuminate us.

'Big Labor' is us

Did you receive an urgent plea from your assemblyman Steve Baldwin complaining that he had to match the big money from Big Labor that will be going to his opponent Marge Carlson (retired school teacher from El Cajon)?

This letter is absurd for at least two reasons. First, Marge has no campaign funds from Big Labor or Little Labor, just small money from friends.

Even if she did receive a contribution from a labor union, she could not hope to match the hundreds of thousands which the assemblyman routinely raises from Big Tobacco, Big Insurance, Big Medicine, Big Car Dealers, Big HMOs and so on.

And second, because his letter takes a blatant anti-labor stance in a state which is on recent record as pro-labor. Most of us are organized: janitors, teachers, fire fighters, doctors, lawyers, Realtors. And why shouldn't we be? It is our right.

In the June election, Nadia Davies tried to blame her recall on "union bosses," but the voters of the Grossmont District rejected "union bashing" and voted to recall her, with 76 percent. In the same election the voters of California rejected an initiative (Proposition 226) intended to undermine the influence of unions.

Organized or unorganized, this nation has staunchly supported the rights of workers and others to associate and take part in political action, be they coal miners or stock brokers. And Marge Carlson believes in this fundamental right.

If Big Labor or Small Individuals would like to help unseat Assemblymember Steve Baldwin — just pick up your phone and call Marge Carlson at 444-9543.

Youth Summerstock tackles 'Jesus Christ Superstar'

by Susanne Riddle-Haslinger

Since 1982, the Youth Summer Stock Theater, a community theater company based at Granite Hills High School in El Cajon, has been entertaining San Diego with blockbuster musicals each summer.

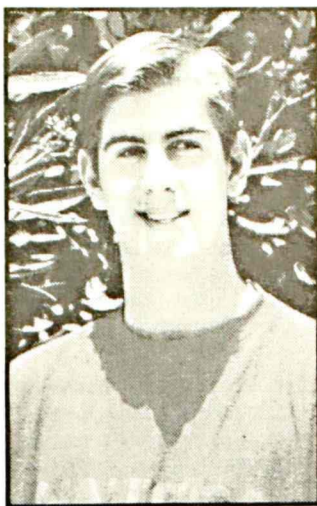

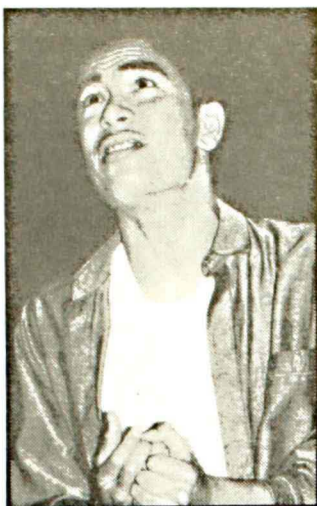

Currently in production is the rock opera, "Jesus Christ Superstar."

"Jesus Christ Superstar" is directed by Barry Bosworth, founder of Youth Summer Stock Theater (YSST) and drama teacher at Granite Hills High School.

Though YSST is strictly a teenage theater company, it is classified as a "community theater," not affiliated with a high school program. The troupe competes yearly with adult community productions throughout San Diego.

YSST is open to all San Diego teens up to the age of 18 and has received many awards, including the most recent Aubrey Awards, presented by Associated Community Theaters.

YSST was honored for its production of "Fiddler On The Roof." Santee's Max Macke (age 18) received the Best Actor

The all-teen cast of "Jesus Christ Superstar" is led by the able voices of Matt Romero (left) and Greg Gibson.

Award for his performance of Tevye, not only beating out four adults for this award, but receiving the first perfect score from the judges in 18 years.

One of the most unique qualities of the YSST is that every actor and actress is guaranteed a performing part during each of the shows, often sharing the roles on alternating nights.

Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice's "Jesus Christ Superstar" is an exceptionally difficult musical score that can put the fear of God into adult performers. YSST's cast of 13- to 18-year-olds tackle it with zeal.

As an opera, the show has no dialogue. All lines are sung and the actors are challenged to create and express their characters personalities and emotions to the audience through their vocals and movements.

YSST does not disappoint the audience with this ability.

Greg Gibson of El Cajon sings the role of Jesus with a strong and versatile voice, capturing the difficult ranges from bass to rock falsetto.

Judas is played equally well by Matt Romero, also of El Cajon. He and Gibson have the most challenging vocals, requiring fast-paced and wide-ranged musical dialogue while portraying heart-wrenching emotions.

Perhaps the most touching and moving song in the show is "Gethsemane," in which Jesus faces his fears and the terror of his upcoming death. It is during this song that Gibson truly mesmerizes his audience with his vocal and acting ability.

Mary Magdalene, played by Santee's Jessica Seymour, performs her soothing role with a strong and pleasant voice, which remarkably resembles that of actress Yvonne Ellerman, the original Mary Magdalene.

High priests Caiaphas and Annas are played by Justin Kent and Paul Haile, respectively. This bass and tenor duo act and sing their chilling roles with choreographed perfection.

Two notable performances come from Aaron Mellon, portraying Pontius Pilate, and Joey Minnich, who plays King Herod. Both actors nearly steal the show with their short, but outstanding performances.

Another show-stopping number features Herod and his bevy of dancing girls performing lively, speak-easy, Charleston-style dance steps, led expertly by Minnich.

The musical is supported by a strong vocal and dancing chorus, as well as instrumentals performed by Frank Samagaio on guitar, Austin Daniels on drums, Roseann Adams on flute, Eric DeLand on bass. Set design is by Greg Bass and costumes by Amy Skinner. The choreography by Alisa Crandall was a flawless mixture of ballet, jazz and rock moves from the 1970s.

"Jesus Christ Superstar" will continue to run at 7:30 p.m. through Tuesday (no show on Sunday), at the Granite Hills High School Theater, 1719 E. Madison Ave. in El Cajon. Ticket prices are $10 for adults and $7 for children under 12.

YSST's next production will be the musical comedy of Cole Porter's "Anything Goes," running for nine performances from Aug. 5 - 14. For more information, call 442-3468.

BBB offers tips on investment clubs

For thousands of investment clubs in the United States, outright fraud is a major reason why many investments fall short of aspirations, said the San Diego Better Business Bureau (BBB).

"Investment clubs can be a fun and a terrific social setting to learn about stocks and bonds," said Gerry Wilson, local BBB president. "But some investment clubs can be vulnerable to fraud, and you could lose your hard-earned money."

According to the National Association of Investors Corp., an umbrella group for about 36,000 clubs, one of the most common cases of fraud is when a club official, usually the treasurer, absconds with members' cash.

The BBB offers the following tips that might help in avoiding financial troubles:

- The best investment clubs limit membership to a set number of members who have a long-term commitment to growth, rather than following a "get-rich-quick" philosophy from some investment guru.

Time-proven approaches to investing success — diligent research, asset allocation, staying in for the long haul — might be boring, but they work. Investors should pick a club that suits their risk tolerance and financial goals.

- It's a good idea to have a diversified portfolio as a protection against swings in certain segments of the market. Members should invest a set amount each month regardless of market conditions and agree to reinvest dividends instead of keeping the money in a pickle jar.

- All members of an investment club should learn how to audit the club's books. Enlist two or three different members each year to audit the club. It's everyone's responsibility to watch for mistakes.

- Choose a new treasurer every two to three years, so the person doesn't get burned out and so everyone can participate. The treasurer's job comes with a steep learning curve. A treasurer-elect should get trained to take over the number-crunching.

- Buy computer software to simplify the treasurer's task of calculating the portfolio's return and teach all members how to use it.

The two main reasons why investment clubs go out of business is conflicts of personality or investment philosophy. The second is they can't get anyone to be the treasurer.

Every investment club should have a written agreement that outlines the club's policies, how it will deal with a stock broker or advisor, amount of monthly contributions, selection of officers, mandatory attendance and what happens when a member leaves the club and wants to be paid his or her shares. All members should be expected to participate by presenting research and recommendations on promising companies and industries.

Many babies still exposed to air bag risks

Surveys show 99 percent of parents with children under age 1 say they have heard about the risks air bags pose to children. Yet, 11 percent of parents who regularly transport an infant in a vehicle equipped with a passenger air bag continue to place babies in the front seat.

This amounts to as many as 175,000 babies at serious risk, said Janet Dewey, executive director of the Air Bag & Seat Belt Safety Campaign.

"Infants should never, ever ride in the front seat of a vehicle with a passenger air bag," Dewey said. "Riding up front in an infant seat, a baby's fragile head and neck are always too close to the deploying air bag in the event of a crash."

While the overall rate of child deaths from air bags has declined by 50 percent and there are encouraging signs that more drivers are properly restraining children in the back seat, too many children are continuing to die, Dewey said.

Infants under 1 year of age account for roughly one in 12 of the children at risk, yet they account for about one in five of the child deaths.

To date, of the 63 children who died in crashes involving air bags, 13 were babies riding in infant seats. Investigations also indicate that almost all of these infants were five months old or younger.

"We think some parents believe the risk of not seeing a baby is greater than the risk of injury in a crash. That's just wrong," said Joseph R. Zanga, M.D., American Academy of Pediatrics president. "Parents must understand that automobile crashes are the leading cause of injury to our children. The safest way for pre-adolescent children to ride — including babies — is properly restrained in the back seat."

The research also shows that parents are more likely to follow proper safety procedures as their children age. Fully one-quarter of parents incorrectly place infants ages one to three months old in the front seat, while only eight percent put 10- to 12-month-old infants in the front seat.

The risks air bags pose to children are entirely eliminated when children ride properly restrained in the back seat. Crashes are the leading cause of death to children. With or without an air bag, children are safer in the back.

Studies show that, even in vehicles without air bags, the death rate to children drops by one third when kids ride properly restrained in the back seat.

The research also shows that 20 percent of parents with and without air bag-equipped vehicles report not properly restraining their infants. Since crashes are the leading cause of death to children and with or without an air bag, the back is the safest place for children to ride — nearly 800,000 children are at increased risk in a crash.

The Air Bag & Seat Belt Safety Campaign and others are stepping up their outreach to new and expectant parents by providing free materials through national organizations that can best reach their target audiences.

For more information on air bag safety, visit the campaign's web site at www.nsc.org/airbag.htm, or call (202) 625-2570.

Air Bag Safety Tips

- Infants should never ride in front of a passenger air bag.
- Babies should ride in rear-facing infant seats in the back seat until at least age 1 and at least 22 pounds.
- The risks air bags pose to children are entirely eliminated when children ride properly restrained in the back seat.
- Children 12 and younger should ride in correct age- and size-appropriate safety seats or seat belts in the back seat.
- Check your vehicle's owner's manual and the instructions provided with your child safety seat for correct use information.

Getting fired up

El Cajon Fire Department Capt. Doug Elliott (left) and Padres first baseman Wally Joyner pose with burn survivor Diana Medina and get ready for the annual Burn Run/Fire EXPO, 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday at Qualcomm Stadium. More than 70 fire trucks and engines will convoy from around the county with donations to the Burn Institute. Elliott also chairs the EXPO, the day-long firefighting fair in the stadium parking lot.

Hundreds of unusual scholarships available

A conservative estimate of college costs for a full-time student runs from $10,000 - $30,000; high-cost colleges can run from $40,000 - $100,000.

Most parents and students think that scholarships are only for the students with excellent grades, low-income families or the athletically inclined.

A small example of the numerous scholarships available to students include: handicapped student scholarships, members of a church scholarships, scholarships for "C" students, veteran children's scholarships, scholarships for minorities and others.

Though the majority of scholarships are from the federal government and are merit and/or need-based, billions of dollars are available to students from private-sector scholarships.

Much of private-sector financial aid goes unused because the parents and students do not know how or where to apply.

There are organizations that have spent hundreds of hours in research locating scholarship sources.

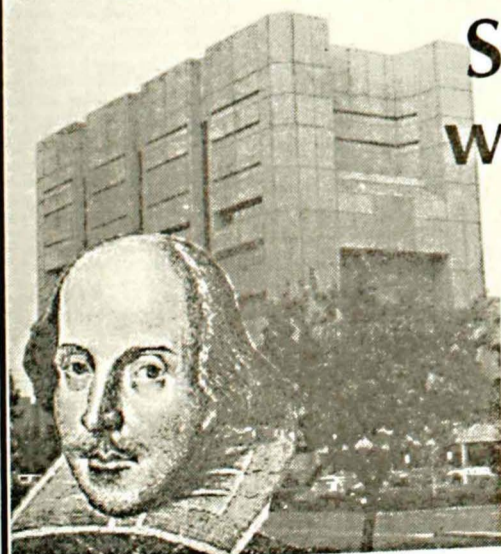

The U.S. Commission for Scholastic Assistance-College Bound is such an organization and supplies the public with more than 700 different private scholarships sources.

The scholarship list include the scholarship names, addresses, application deadlines, summaries about the scholarships and the amount the scholarship will pay the student.

Many scholarships pay the entire tuition; others can be applied towards tuition, living expenses, and/or other fees. Most scholarships can be used at junior colleges, career and vocational schools, four-year colleges, graduate schools, medical and law schools.

For information on obtaining these scholarship lists, send a self-addressed, stamped business size, #10 envelope to: The U.S. Commission for Scholastic Assistance, P.O. Box 668, O'Fallon, Ill. 62269.

Lake's got a good idea

Interesting article about the Planning Commission, [Lake stumps to dump Planning Commission, July 16 issue] interesting to me, i.e. because I knew so little about the Planning Commission. I thought a Planning Commission made recommendations to the council and the council then took action. Saved the council's time, expedited the matter. However, I now see that Sacramento's input causes long, sometimes expensive, delays, and that is one of the reasons Lemon Grove has so many vacant stores. Another reason, of course, is the bureaucratic delays our administration staff can conjure up.

Small businesses, by their very nature (i.e. small), are often opened by brave entrepreneurs hoarding and harvesting meagre resources, taking a chance on building a new life. Faced with inordinate delays on what the city will permit, on one hand, and faced with over-large permit fees, on the other, will opt to try their luck in a friendlier municipal venue.

Do away with the Planning Commission and its mandated time traps, engage in one or another of the suggested plans the article contained. Only one thing should be added; when the planning group makes its recommendations, and if they are unfavorable to the applicants, there should be an appeals function. I recommend an ombudsman who will review the project from all angles and report to the council.

Dumb and dumber

Are you voting for an incumbent? If you are, have you asked yourself why? Have you ever written to or called your incumbent to congratulate him or her for a particular action? Have you ever requested them to investigate or give an answer to a particular request? If so, did you get a direct answer or was your request merely forwarded to the fox guarding the chicken coop, so to speak. You probably already talked to the fox and was dissatisfied with the answer.

Have you asked any of the incumbents under what Constitutional authority can one private citizen be forced to donate money directly to another private citizen? Point in question is the first $3.50 addition to your phone bill. This is not a tax that goes into the general fund and must be allocated by appropriations. This is not a charge for any service or use by the phone company. It is a forced donation imposed by the Federal Communications Commission. The money goes to other private citizens to subsidize or start them in a phone business. In California alone this equates to $42 million a month. Multiply this by all the states. That is quite a public involuntary donation.

This question has been posed to Duncan Hunter's office who in turn forwarded it to the Congressional Law Office. A gentleman in the law office by the name of Robert B. Burdette responded by saying that he did not understand the question. Several months have passed and no answer has been received from either Mr. Burdette or Duncan Hunter's office as to why a fourth grade level question cannot be understood or answered. Are we ready for more infringements upon our Constitutional rights?

'Love Letters' gets one-night stand at Octad Playhouse

Love is never easy. When it is true, it runs deep. When it is honest, we cannot bear it. When it lasts, it is a miracle.

"Love Letters," A.R. Gurney's unique and imaginative theater piece about a profound love conveyed through the mail, will be performed on one night only, 8 p.m. Saturday, at the Octad-One Playhouse, 10009 Maine St. in Lakeside.

With roles sought after by some of the most famous people in acting to include Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton, Matthew Broderick and Helen Hunt, the play is considered a classic.

The story is comprised of letters exchanged over a lifetime between two people who grew up together, went separate ways, but continued to share confidences.

As actors read the letters aloud, what is created is an evocative, touching, frequently funny but always telling pair of character studies. What is implied between the lines is as revealing and meaningful as what is actually written down.

The two main characters, Andrew Makepeace Ladd II and Melissa Gardner, begin their lifelong correspondence with birthday party thank-you notes and summer camp postcards.

They have a young romance, but are separated by school, war, and eventually marriage and careers. Eventually, Andy and Melissa have a brief affair, but it is really too late for both of them.

Andy's last letter, written to her mother after Melissa's untimely death, makes it eloquently clear how much they really meant to each other over the years. Although physically apart, they were spiritually as close as only true lovers can be.

Wayne Erreca explains the reason for the play's one-night stand, as a "special treat" afforded by a dark night at the theater and the availability of actors Stephen Bair and Karyn Lewis Searcy, co-founders of the Light Horse Theater in Imperial Beach.

Searcy and Bair are also trying to gather support and develop a following for their production company and theater, and say they enjoy co-productions with other theaters in the area.

The two produced the show in Imperial Beach last winter to sold-out audiences — despite El Niño's attempt to wash them away — and again in Ramona last spring.
